BROOKLYN SOCIETY

Mardi Gras Cost City $2,000—Puts Ban on Parked Streets.

It cost the city $2,000 to conduct one department during the week of the Comedy Island Mardi Gras. According to reports filed in Brooklyn, the Street Cleaning Department spent this sum, and with it 1,440 tons of concrete and streamers were removed from the streets while the carnival was in progress. This amount is 40 tons greater than was removed last year. On the job sixty men and sixty carts were used from 2 a. m. to 10 a. m. each day. Each cart removed sixteen loads of waste, and the 90 loads removed by the six carts totaled 1,520 cubic yards of material. Much of the paper was burned at the dumps.

The Diocesan Union of the Holy Name Society will hold its annual rally on Sunday. Upward of 25,000 members of the organization will take part. The diocese has been divided into nineteen districts, each with a church at which the members will assemble. The members in each parish designated as a rendezvous will meet visiting delegations and escort them to the church. The devotional services will begin at 4 o'clock. There was some talk a few months ago of holding the rally on the parade grounds at Prospect Park, but the plan will not be tried until it has received more consideration.

The County Court opened for the fall last week, three parts being ready for business. Judge George W. Ward, of Rockland County, took charge of the criminal calendar in Part I, and Judge Joseph L. Moore, of Montgomery County, in Part II, took up the civil calendar. A year ago, when the court opened, there were only two parts, but two additional courtrooms have been made of the quarters formerly occupied by the Sheriff and of those occupied by the District Attorney. Judge Lewis L. Fawcett is expected to return to Brooklyn within a few days.

While the people of the Greenpoint section are not yet ready to deny the truth of the old maxim, "The early bird gets the worm," they do deny that an early application to butchers. This came into court the other day, when Jacob Brown, of No. 8 Middleton street, was haled before the judge for trying to initiate the much honored early bird. In fact, he found that he had carried the early bird business to such an excess that he had subjected himself to the penalties provided for in Section 1530 of the Penal Code.

His neighbors informed Magistrate Nauman that he was in the habit of beginning work at 4 o'clock mornings. They first complained to the police that the noise of his cleaver kept them awake, but the police did not seem to mind. So Mrs. Mary Boer, of No. 81 Middleton street, went to the Manhattan avenue police court and got out a warrant for Brown's arrest. Magistrate Nauman held him for trial at Special Sessions. All of which goes to show that there are exceptions even to the old maxims.

Now that the mosquitoes have left, Flatbush would be perfectly happy but for one thing—Lewis H. Pounds, the Public Works Commissioner, has indicated that the administration will not look favorably upon much more street parking schemes. If there is anything that the people of Flatbush pride themselves on it is their street flower beds and grass plots.

It is the custom in the neighborhood to fill the streets so well with flowers that ordinary trucks cannot get by them without great difficulty. While there is a lot to be said in favor of the flowers, Mr. Pounds believes that something may be said also in favor of the wagons. President Miller of the Bronx has decided to stop the street parking in his district, and it would appear that the Brooklyn administration may soon follow his example.

AN APPEAL FOR CHARITY.
A young widow who lost her husband four months ago has four children under ten years of age. She finishes trousers, earning 25 cents a day, and a young brother who is earning $7 a week lives with her and contributes all his earnings toward the support of the family. Her husband was ill for six months and relatives paid the funeral expenses, as there was no insurance. The Brooklyn Bureau of Charities has been paying her rent for three months. They ask for $12 to pay the rent for one year, contributions to be sent to the Brooklyn Bureau of Charities, No. 69 Schermerhorn street, marked No. 614.

Weddings, Engagements and Announcements.

Miss Ethel James Adams and Morris Upham Ely are so widely known through their various activities that the formal announcement of their engagement, made on Wednesday, was of unusual interest. Miss Adams is the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horatio Mortimer Adams, of No. 51 Montgomery Place, and Appleton, Glen Cove, Long Island. Her sister, Miss Jean Dunbar Adams, married Robert Gair, Jr., last October. Since their debut, four or five years ago, they have taken a foremost part in the social life of Brooklyn and Glen Cove, and were in evidence as bridesmaids at the most important weddings. ## TERRY'S INDEPENDENCE

Refuses to Vote for Charter at Tammany's Behest.

The independence of Assemblyman Edmund R. Terry, the representative of the 1st Assembly District, Brooklyn, has again asserted itself in his stand upon the proposed charter. Mr. Terry's independent turn of mind first attracted attention in 1908, when he resigned from the chairmanship of the Democratic Campaign Committee of the Kings County organization because he did not favor the candidacy of William Jennings Bryan and was unwilling to support his election as President of the United States.

His refusal to submit to machine dictation on the question of the charter is in line with his former exhibition of independence. His friends say they feel sure that he will continue to refuse to jump to the crack of the Tammany whip, even though the threat of denying him a nomination is held over him. His constituents are watching him and approving his firm stand against rushing through the Tiger's charter.

Terry represents a district that is largely Republican in sentiment. The 1st Assembly District is one of the most popular in Brooklyn. It includes Brooklyn Heights, the old-time home of fashion, and still the families of the Loys, the Pierponts, the Lathbells, the Peabodys, the Howens, the Dikes and others. The Terrys figure among these families. But the section also includes blocks of people who never figured in the society columns. Another element is the boarding house and hotel population. Politicians have had trouble in getting candidates from the section capable of pleasing the majority.

The Republicans have been the most successful and Mr. Terry has been one of the few Democrats able to check them. If he is renominated by his party this fall it is safe to say that it will only be because Sheriff P. H. Quinn, his leader, and other Democratic leaders believe that he has the ability to roll up a big vote among the so-called "blue stockings."

Even with his strength among the old Heights families in view, the Democrats are likely to hesitate this fall, it is generally understood. All the Democratic legislators from Brooklyn who stood for Edward M. Shepard as United States Senator, and thus incurred the resentment of Charles F. Murphy, have been scheduled to go, and Murphy, who was a Shepard man. His stand early in the year was another exhibition of his independence.

Mr. Terry is not the first member of his family who has done things. His grandfather, John H. Prentice, once a leading merchant of Brooklyn and the founder of the Prentice stores, held the position of Water Commissioner, Bridge Commissioner and Park Commissioner. He was largely responsible for the laying out of the Coney Island Boulevard, now the finest and most popular driveway in the borough. His father, Edmund Terry, was a lawyer. Mr. Terry was born in Brooklyn on June 11, 1856. He was one of a family of seven brothers. He has never married, and lives with some of his brothers in the old home, No. 12 Remsen street.

As a boy he attended Hart's School, and afterward went to Yale University, being graduated in 1878 with William Howard Taft. At college he was a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity. He next studied law at Columbia University. His political career began soon after his admission to the bar. He represented the district in the Assembly in 1906. He is a writer as well as a politician. He wrote "The Patchmaker," a play, years ago, and has contributed to magazines and periodicals ever since.

Mr. Terry was one of the founders of the Crescent Athletic Club and belongs to the Hamilton Club, the Alhambra Lodge and the local Democratic club.

NEW BROOKLYN PLANS

Many Long Rows of Dwelling Houses To Be Built.

Large numbers of Brooklyn builders have planned to be busy for many months putting up brick dwelling houses in the rapidly growing home sections of the borough.

The Teutonic Corporation is going to spend $20,000 for eight two-story houses to occupy a plot in 6th street, west of Nineteenth avenue. The designs for the houses were recently filed by Henry Maher, architect. Each house will be 17,631.6 feet. On the easterly side of Apollo street, north of Meeker avenue, twelve two-family two-story houses, 18,350 feet each, will be erected by David E. Morris (Incorporated) from plans by Philip Tilton & Son. The total cost will be $54,000.

A $22,000 project calls for the erection of ten two-family, three-story brick houses, with stores at the southeast corner of Fulton street and Hale avenue by the Lecom Building Company, from plans by Cohn Brothers. The entire row will have a frontage, in the street, of 23,323.6 feet, and the other structures 20,335 feet.

Another group of three-story brick houses will stand on a large plot on the southerly side of Winthrop street, just east of Flatbush avenue. Each will be for one family. One house will be 17,847 feet, another one 17,457 feet, and six 17,457 feet. The estimated cost is $35,000. The row will be built by William A. A. Brown from plans by Benjamin Driesler.

A row of five two-family, two-story brick houses will be erected in 42d street, near Tilden avenue, by Jacob Mass, from plans by Abraham Farber, at a cost of $22,000. Each house will be 20,335 feet. C. Schubert has drawn plans for the improvement of a plot at the northwest corner of 7th street and Fourteenth avenue, with a two-story brick house, 19,12 feet, at a cost of $5,500, and for an adjoining site fronting on the avenue, with nine two-story brick houses, 18,42 feet each, the total proposed expenditure being $25,000 for the nine structures. Jacob Kaiser will be the owner. William C. Mulligan will invest $21,000 in six two-story frame houses for one family each on the southerly side of 43d street, 200 feet east of Eighteenth avenue. Each house will be 18,420 feet. Plans have been drawn by Peter Ersen.

One of the finest groups of small houses planned for a Brooklyn site this year will be in Drew avenue, 30 feet north of Broadway. The houses will be ten in number, two stories high and 20,335 feet each. They will be put up from designs by Louis Dananacher for Charles H. Ryan, at a cost of $28,000.

The American Mantel Manufacturing Company intends to build sixteen two-story frame dwelling houses, each for one family, in 63d street, north of West Nineteenth avenue, at a total cost of $45,000. Each house will be 22,300 feet. The plans have been drawn by Henry Maher.

The High Grade Construction Company has had plans filed for the erection of eight two-family, two-story brick houses for a plot on the westerly side of Twentieth avenue, 50 feet north of Frederick J. Dasau. Each house will be 20,335 feet. The cost is placed at $22,000.

artistic yet practical country homes near the city. Although Great Neck is at the present time only thirty minutes' ride from the Pennsylvania Station, a person on the ground might imagine that he was in the Berkshires, two hundred miles from New York City, so rural yet thoroughly practical is the layout of the colony.

The developer of Great Neck Villa, the Shields Company, has been actively engaged throughout the summer months with the erection of twelve new houses costing from $15,000 to $30,000. These houses have all been erected on the orders of the purchasers of plots in the colony, and the houses already completed make the total number of homes about thirty.

The structure has a spacious court, insuring plenty of air and light. The rooms are of hardwood trim, parlors in white enamel, bedrooms in oak and enamel, and dining rooms in oak, panelled six feet high, with Dutch stain shelling. The building is in a location convenient to the subway and surface cars.

CONCRETE EXPERIMENT.

An experiment of great interest and importance so far as the future of concrete construction is concerned, is about to be made at Leonia, N. J.

One of the chief difficulties in connection with the use of concrete in dwelling houses—whether by the "pouring" method or in block form—has been its tendency to absorb moisture. This frequently made damp interiors and was liable to cause no end of

FINE NEW QUEENS ROAD.

The last of an important series of road improvements along the north shore of Queens has been completed by the extension of the Maiba Drive automobile highway, in Maiba, to the end of the White-stone peninsula. The road opens another direct route to the middle sections of the north shore, and was built in anticipation of its general use from the upper part of The Bronx and the lower end of Westchester County when the new ferry lines are opened. Connections have now been established for automobilists from formerly inaccessible parts of the north shore with Jackson and Thompson avenues, the main highways leading to the Queensboro Bridge and the Bayside of Long Island, and a spur has also been built to connect with the proposed shore front drive to the government reservation at Willet's Point.
